1. [REDACTED] has just completed the final draft of his PhD dissertation for American University's department of Far Eastern studies. The largest portion of the manuscript consists of information gleaned from US archives at Alexandria and Suitland -- most of the original files of the Marshall mission to China. [REDACTED] work is primarily an examination of the "truce" year in China -- 1946. He will defend his paper in May after his return from Saigon, and subsequently will try to develop an article on this subject for Studies in Intelligence. ✓

2. We are continuing our efforts to apply the lessons learned in the recent CT course concerning ways and means of effectively handling the new subject matter which has been introduced. We seem to be reasonably squared away in terms of appropriate readings, but the oral section has not yet fallen into place. We're still trying to sort out timing, substantive emphasis, relevance -- and, to some degree -- whether to go the lecture or the seminar route. We plan some additional adjustments in the Introduction to Communism beginning on 9 March. There is now, of course, a real need for a change of title here. I am hopeful that this will be accomplished shortly -- when a real integration of the IO and the IC takes place.
